Jacque - understand the RCMP may be ready to brief on the Ottawa plan. If so we should do it at 1pm.

Thanks

Good morning, just following up on my email below. Looks like the situation in Windsor is resolving itself as hoped (fingers still crossed) and all signs are we will have an IRG this afternoon (4pm tbc). We are going into DM meeting at 10-11 and will advise afterwards if there are any new or significant developments that Ministers might need to be aware of prior to IRG later this afternoon. Maybe on that basis we can decide whether to proceed or cancel the 1pm briefing. We should probably decide sooner than later so Ministers / their staff know and can plan their day accordingly.

Samantha, Zita, just wanted to plant a seed tonight and no need to answer until the morning. It sounds like we are preparing for another IRG for tomorrow afternoon (time TBC). If the IRG is confirmed, I think our advice will be to cancel the Ministerial briefing tomorrow at 1pm. That way Ministers will (hopefully) receive a fuller situational update and be able to discuss next steps at same time.

Hope this makes sense. I will touch base in the morning.

Samantha, Zita, good morning. We are just wondering whether we should go ahead with the Ministerial Briefing on Truckers Convoy at 1pm (given the IRG at 3pm). While the agenda is still being developed, we expect one element will be operational updates (similar to the last IRG).

If we proceed, it would give Ministers and senior officials access to the same situational update information before going into IRG. However, we also acknowledge that there will be some repetition between the 2 meetings and it would reduce Ministers/DMs prep time for 3pm.

What do you think? Do you want to canvass other Minister's Offices (or want me to)?

Happy to adjust either way.
